Rap Lin Rie /World Speedwords

Ordinary writing at Shorthand Speed for all Languages

This, the only World Brief-Script in existence, breaks down all the present language barriers to free international correspondence between all countries.

"Another outstanding and attractive feature of Dutton Speedwords [Rap Lin Rie] is the fact that it is the first abbreviated writing invention in history which at once transcribes all languages." ---R. J. G. Dutton

Rap Lin Rie Used as a SHORTHAND System

Rap Lin Rie, as you know by now is not only an international auxiliary language, but it is also a nifty, effective shorthand system. For those who just wish to double, triple or quadruple their writing/notetaking speed, this page will explore the shorthand basics.

1. Learn these 10 shorthand words and increase your longhand writing speed by 25%.

the = l; of = d; and = &; to = a; in = i; a = u; that = k; is = e; was = y; he = s.

FACT: Twenty-five percent of all written communication in the English language is made up of just ten words. (Other languages have their similar words.) "When we write, we use just ten words over and over again, so frequently in fact, that one of those ten words is used on the average every five words." Rapid Writing in 6 Days. Page 34.

Practice using these ten words immediately. In ten minutes or less you can have them memorized. Now, write them ten times each. And, as you write them, say out loud the meaning of the word. Here's how:

Write l, say the, write l, say the, ten times. Then write d, say of, etc. Do this with all ten words. Then reverse the process.

Write the, say l (el), write of, say d, etc. Do this with all ten words. Now, guess what? You can now write 25% faster than you could before.

Here are practice sentences for you:

L book e mine.

K book e f you.

&. I like k book f me.

E k my book?

S said k e his book.

T y my book first.

Go a l book store & see k t e your book.

Speedwords

Introductory lesson

K y real easy. & just think, t only took ten minutes, or so.

NOTICE: From c point on, as u new word e learned, t will be used i l text a explain l rest d l system. l fact, i case you have not noticed t, we began a do k already.

Now, before reading any further, take u nice break. Come back refreshed & ready a increase your speed.

2. At this point, we are going a teach you a double your writing speed!

FACT: "If you add another forty words to the initial ten common words you have already learned and have been practicing, you will know fifty of the most common words used in English. In fact, 50 percent of all written communication consists of these fifty words." Rapid Writing in 6 Days, p. 52.

Here is l list of those forty new words:

Words 11-20:

it = t; you = v; as = z; not = n; he = s; will = r; have = h; with = m; be = e, l = j.

Now, please practice these words just like v did m l first set d ten. Then, take your break & come back when v are refreshed. Don't forget a use these new words right away.

Now, some more practice sentences:

J know v are u friend.

Z soon z v can, write me.

T e best k v go home m u friend.

J r n h l book here until late.

J like Rap Lin Rie. T e fun a write.

Dutton's Phrasings

Rap Lin Rie/ World Speedwords was meant to be a "double-speed" writing system. Once the student's vocabulary had developed, the desire to be more efficient in writing comes more into play. Dutton taught the use of phrasing to help achieve this desire. Every space saved in typing, or every lifting of the pen in writing that is reduced, increases one's speed in writing. Rap Lin Rie becomes more efficient as the student progresses. And, on top of that, Rap Lin Rie is still a complete international language for universal correspondence.

I hope this list is a help to those of you who are now beginning to use Rap Lin Rie.

Speedwords dictionary

Introduction

Based on a transcription by Richard Kennaway from the "Dutton Speedwords Dictionary" by R.J.G. Dutton, published by Dutton Rapid Writing Systems Ltd. 4th edition, 1951. Additional information from "Teach Yourself Dutton Speedwords" by R.J.G. Dutton, published by Teach Yourself Books, revised edition, 1971.

This edition has been produced in December 2006 for the DIY Planner (<http://www.diyplanner.com>) by Liam Brown.

Speedwords are listed down the left-hand side of each column pair with the corresponding English word on the right. A hyphen in a speedword separates the components, though the hyphen is not part of the speedword as customarily written. A part of a speedword in parentheses may be omitted for speed. Where a part of a speedword is enclosed in curly brackets, the bracketed section may be included or omitted, giving two different legal speedwords, sometimes with slightly different meanings. For example, "axe" and "axem" both mean "petition"; the latter specifically means a physical object, whereas the former is a verb or abstract noun.

Where a speedword is a contraction of a longer form, the derivation is indicated in square brackets, e.g. az[al oz].

Synonymous English definitions are separated by commas spaces. A parenthesized part of an English definition is for disambiguation, to explain which of several meanings of the defining word is intended.

Several classes of words are regularly formed by prefixes and suffixes, and are therefore for the most part omitted from the dictionary. These are:

- plurals (-z)
- comparatives (me-)
- superlatives (my-)
- past tenses (y-)
- present participles (u-)
- past participles (-d)
- negatives formed by the English affixes in-, un-, and -less (-n)
- possibilities formed by the English suffixes -able, and -ible (-b)

Thus the speedword for "incredible" is "krenb".

Extra parenthesized English explanations are sometimes given where a definition appeared obscure on its own (e.g. tur-fi-v bow(knot)). Misprints were corrected where noted, but a text this extensive is always difficult to check with adequate thoroughness. Should you find a misprint, please e-mail me at liams\(dot\)toaster\(at\)gmail\(dot\)comtoaster(at)gmail(dot)com).
